You cannot keep people out of D.C. if they are on foot.

Ask any General Officer from the Department of Defense.

Why else do you think road marches are integral to Soldier and Marine Basic Training?

If you cannot walk 50 miles with all needed supplies on your back, you are a liability in ground warfare, not an asset.

Also if this goes hot, the high ground at Arlington National Cemetery will be raining down mortar rounds onto the Lincoln Memorial and other crowd gathering areas.

They train up there regularly, mortar tubes out in the open right by the horse stables for the Old Guard, next to the dining facility parking lot.

Hopefully they will not start with HE rounds.

No military would fire on civilians. Agreed.

The crowds will be declared enemy combatants, just like how the FBI declared everyone here as White Supremacists.

Captain to the NCOIC : "They WILL send those rounds! Command declared those bastards down there as ENEMY COMBATANTS! EVERY OTHER ONE HAS AN ASSAULT RIFLE! FIRE FOR EFFECT!!!"

Critical Race Theory is a religion to freshly minted Officers these days.

Butter Bar out of ROTC from University : "White ain't right and should not be in charge in the military anymore."

While I agree with you, just like war, there is a place for all kinds of soldiers, not just the battlefield.

We need our TechOps keeping track of the all the documents, leaks, court rulings, audit reports, etc.

We need our Meme Warriors keeping moral high and linking together key pieces of facts with relevant pictures and text, also more red pill ammo.

We need our Heroes at Home keeping the legislators and courts phones ringing demanding justice.

And we absolutely need our show of solidarity and strength in numbers in person, outside key buildings and especially at rallies.

God speed Patriots.

This is a perfect analogy to what we're now regularly seeing over and over again from the Leftist media, because Santa is a not only a hoax, but a hoax perpetrated through monolithic gaslighting by people who know full well it's a hoax and get perverse pleasure through lying about it.

Oh, sht, I just managed to convince myself to hate Santa in the short time it took to write that.

I have young kids, and this is the exact reason why we don't lie to them about Santa Claus. I feel like there is some subtle damage done to young minds when they discover they've been lied to by their parents, the people they should most trust. I don't get why you would want them to have a "redpill" moment at like 6 years old.

permalink save report block reply

▲ 6 ▼

– Averon 6 points 3 days ago +6 / -0

I remember as a child suspecting Santa might not be real, then eventually as I got older I realized the truth.

I asked my mom why they lied to me about Santa Clause and she said she didn't lie, that Santa lives in all our hearts... I knew it was BS but didn't say anything about it.

Years later I was at my grandparents house and said to my parents and grandparents that I didn't think it was right to lie about Santa Clause and my grandma was just saying it would take away all the fun of Christmas. I said it's still be fun getting presents on Christmas whether a kid knew it was from their parents or thought it was from Santa, that the truth wouldn't diminish the fun. She just kept insisting though.

Any time I brought it up, I never felt like anybody was really listening to me about it, they all just wanted to make excuses or defend it and it never seemed like they could comprehend my perspective on it, like my perspective was just wrong or something.

– 2008RonPaul2012 6 points 3 days ago +6 / -0

Very interesting. I was raised religious, to the point that my parents thought Christmas and Easter were too pagan, so we never celebrated them. But now that I have kids, I want them to experience the traditions that I missed out on.

But yeah, the thought of gaslighting a 4 year old because it's funny or something is kind of demented when you stop and think about it.

parent permalink save report block reply

▲ 7 ▼

– Averon 7 points 3 days ago +7 / -0

I came to that conclusion as well. If I ever have kids, I may buy them Christmas presents, but they will know who those presents came from and they will know exactly what we are celebrating on that day, the birth of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

I still don't get how so many Christians continue to push a lie like Santa Clause. Like have you ever talked to an Atheist before? 99% of them from Dawkins to Hitchens to the local idiot kid from your own town. Each one seems so lost and lonely and compares the creator with all the childhood made up entities.

" You really believe in God ? So you also believe in Santa Clause and the tooth fairy huh?".

That route I hear from every Atheist.

Their faith was tainted and ruined when they found out the fat man was not real and they realized their parents were full of shit. Christians need to stop. And for me and my house my kids will never believe a lie.

It does good with my patients at my nursing job, and so I'll contribute what I can.

Reality doesn't happen to you. It responds to you. You create your own path, but you will reap the fruit you sow one way or another. Whether it's doing what's right or cowardice when those who can't defend themselves needed you. You craft your own reality.

Why is this stickied? Really? Why does irrelevant shit like this keep getting stickied?! The ONLY things that should be stickied (for now) is major news and event organizations. We need to organize (not just talk about organizing) and shit like this detracts from that. Also, this shit is just preaching to the choir. This isn't fun and games anymore.

Even as soldiers prepared for horrors such as D-Day and the Battle of the Bulge, their leaders realized that morale was as important as knowing your weapon system. Yes, there are always a few who will stay at home and shave a second off their field strip-and-assemble times, but most of the crew went out on the town, had some fun, and made some memories. Who became the heroes of the hour when the ramp dropped on a blood-soaked beach? I suspect you saw plenty from both camps. We each have to learn and prepare in our own way. This is what gives the resulting army resilience and resourcefulness.
